

TALMADGE, ASSEMBLY PRAISED BY EDUCATORS

Governor's Pledge To Pay Off Debts Due Schools Lauded in Resolution.

Commendation for the acts and plans of Governor Talmadge and the general assembly contributing to the educational system of the state was voiced in a resolution adopted Saturday by a group which included many of the leading educators of the state. The resolution commended the governor's pledge to pay off the old debts due to the schools, the state charitable institutions and the university system; house bill 511 guaranteeing to Georgia's children a minimum school term of seven months; reinstatement of the bonds of Georgia, owned by the university system, interest on which is now unpaid. The educators endorsed "an appropriation of $4,250,000 to the public schools, to be paid without butts and ifs," and also an appropriation of $1,300,000 to the university system on the same terms. They endorsed tax legislation, particularly a sales tax and an improved income tax. The educators commended the governor for his "pledge of $1,000,000 to provide the university system with necessary building facilities."

Those approving the resolution were the following:

Philip Welner, chancellor, university system; M. D. Collins, state superintendent of schools; Miss Allie B. Mann, president, Georgia Education Association; W. J. Andrews, vice president, Georgia School Superintendents' Association; Andrew Averett, superintendent, DeKalb county schools; C. Hubbard, Baldwin city superintendent; Miss Mary Nelson Simms, principal, Spring Street school, Floyd county; Mrs. R. B.

Whitworth, principal, Teath Street school, Atlanta; Miss Ida Jarrell, principal, Fort Rural school, Appling county; Mason Williams, Walton county superintendent; J. Harold Bazzano, city school superintendent; Jere A. Wells, Fulton county school superintendent; Mark Smith, president Georgia High School Association and Thomson city school superintendent; Lamar Ferguson, DeKalb county superintendent; W. S. Sledge Jr., DeKalb county schools; R. T. Singleton, county superintendent, Calhoun county; Walter Starnes, superintendent of schools, Fitzgerald; G. T. Register, superintendent, Athens city schools; R. G. O'Leary, superintendent, Athens city schools; Max Tolbert, superintendent Gordon county schools.

REVOLT IN GREECE NOW IN MAINLAND

overtaking the cruiser Averoff and scoring a direct hit with an aerial bomb while the vessel lay in Souda bay, near Crete.

Reports received here, said a column of smoke arose from the ship after the bomb struck, leading to the belief she may be put out of action. Unconfirmed reports telling of the arrival of five ships in Crete said three of them were severely damaged.

Venezelos' Home Searched. The government searched the Athens home of former Premier Venezelos, the "grand old man" of Greek politics, twice during the day and reported finding arms and compromising literature.

General George Kondylis, minister of war, personally headed the search at Venezelos' home, where they found Deputy Papanastasiu, recently an opposition spokesman, and another Venezelos associate named Caphandaris in hiding.

The newspaper Estia said today a number of leading politicians called a secret conference which was seeking means to bring order without further bloodshed.

An official communique said four government planes had participated in the bombing of the cruiser Averoff, returning safely after the encounter. Airmen reported seeing a tall column of flame rise over the ship.

Two Ships Bombed. Another official statement throwing doubt upon the report that all five ships had reached Souda bay said two of the ships had been overtaken and bombed near the island of Cythera, with undetermined damage.

The resignation of Foreign Minister D. Maximos, the arrest of the governor-general of Crete, and the resignation of three other cabinet members announced yesterday combined to force the government to call the naval class of 1932 to the colors, and to prepare for calling out army classes on the mainland if necessary. The announced resignation of Foreign Minister D. Maximos, the arrival of five Greek warships under rebel control in Launde, Crete, the arrest of the governor-general of Crete and further upsets in the cabinet combined to force the government to call the naval class of 1932 to the colors, and to prepare for calling out two army classes on the mainland if necessary.

Governor Arrested. Insurgents under the leadership of Colonel T. Sanaakis occupied telegraph stations in Crete and placed Governor General M. E. Apostolitis under arrest.

It was learned today that the revolt had been plotted for a whole year. It broke Friday when by pre-arrangement 20 Greek naval officers, both active and retired, lunched together at a well-known Stadium street restaurant, with uniforms concealed under mufti.

They were conveyed by motor cars to the Salamis arsenal, where they presented old or forged passes. The sentinels who questioned their authority were shot and killed by a high-ranking rebel and the revolt was on.

The five warships were boarded while a number of naval vessels to sail for Crete, where Venezelos had encouraged them to take action. The decree calling the extra classes to the colors was then published.

Rumors that the government intended to hold a parley with the rebels were said to be without foundation. Admiral Tylpidos, who offered yesterday to mediate, attempted privately to bring about a reconciliation with General Demestikas, one of the mutinous officers. He was said to have replied that it would first be necessary to call off the aerial bombardment of the mutinous ships. The government refused, and instead released the rebels to them to support the government on the ground of patriotism.

Russian 'Siamese Twins' Separated; One May Live To Be Normal Child

MOSCOW, March 3.—(UP)—Through a rare and delicate operation Russian "Siamese twin" babies were separated today, and one probably will live to become a normal child.

The other twin, lacking vital organs and a heart, died. The two were joined by tissue at the abdomen, and the abnormal twin received sustenance and blood circulation through the normal child's heart and lungs.

The case was unprecedented in Soviet medical history, and was performed by Dr. S. D. Ternovsky.

Two hours after the physician had severed the two bodies, the living child took nourishment, and hospital attendants predicted confidently she would live.

The twins, daughters of Peter and Nathalie Soldatova—the father a soldier and the mother a housewife—were born on February 2. The imperfect twin had no heart, but the circulatory system apparently operated perfectly. It was certain, however, that unless a successful operation were performed, neither of them would have long survived. The surviving baby was named Elena.

SUCCESS OF OPERATION DEPENDS ON LIGATURES. Whether a "Siamese twin" may be successfully divided is determined largely by the type of attachment, doctors said tonight in discussing an operation performed on a Russian baby.

Physicians said that if the two twins were joined only by tissue then operations could be performed but if the twins are joined by a common bone, such as attachment at the hips, then an operation would be almost impossible without one and probably both of the twins dying. Not only are bones frequently common but vital organs as the heart or stomach sometimes are the same for both twins. In such cases, of course, a successful operation is impossible without death of at least one twin.

Medical records contain at least one case in which a "Siamese twin" was parted and both twins lived, doctors said.

Liberty League Hits 30-Hour Week Bills. WASHINGTON, March 3.—(UP)—Charging they embraced "flagrant" departures from constitutional principles, the American Liberty League today expressed opposition to the Black and Connery bills providing a 30-hour week in industry.

The league statement asserted that the measures, one in the senate and the other in the house, are based "upon fallacious economic theories and would impose upon the federal government an impossible enforcement task involving a tremendous expansion of the Washington bureaucracy."

REPEAL AND TAXES BEFORE ASSEMBLY. Continued From First Page. act which is expected to hit the floor late this week.

A hearing of considerable interest is scheduled for 7:30 o'clock tonight at the Henry Grady hotel, when a subcommittee of Senator J. M. Simmons' finance committee of the senate will hear arguments for and against the chain-store tax. This measure passed the house by a big majority. It places a tax of from $1 to $145 on retail stores, the revenue being partly allocated to units under direction of the state board of control.

Homestead Exemption Approved. The homestead and personal property tax exemption plans already have been passed by the house, which approved exemptions of $5,000 in real estate occupied by home owners and $500 in personal property. The senate committee on constitutional amendments has reported favorably on $2,500 homestead exemptions and $300 personal property exemptions. These measures may be taken up on the floor of the senate this week.

The temperance committee of the senate, headed by Senator John McGehee, of Talbotton, will have a public hearing on the proposed submission of repeal and the beer legalization bills at 2:30 o'clock Wednesday afternoon in the senate chamber. This committee is expected to act on these measures at the conclusion of the session.

Governor Talmadge has made it known that he wants a referendum attached to the beer legalization bill. Administration supporters sought to have the referendum attached to the house without definitely revealing that the governor wanted it and the plan was voted down. However, if the referendum is attached to the bill, the senate, is distinctly pro-Talmadge.

HOUSE BILL HIKING TWO-YEAR BUDGET HIT BY TALMADGE. Continued From First Page. those departments. To increase their income, the county and municipal governments and other departments, especially if the grandfather clause does not apply to all the appropriations bill, can pay out in a year.

"If adopted as submitted by the budget commission I can pay the state out of debt within the next two years, and without the necessity of additional tax levy one dime."

"There is pending legislation concerning homestead exemption, old-age pensions, and elimination of the ad valorem tax. All are constitutional amendments and must be voted on by the people at the next general election, two years from now. They cannot become operative until submitted to the people and voted on and passed."

"The subject that vitally concerns us is the running of this state government for the next two years. I believe that all branches of government, including county and municipal, can reduce their tax. But they can't do it by adding departments and increasing salaries."

"The same percentage can be saved in municipal and county government as has been saved in the state government over the past two years. 'Regardless of what the tax is, it is John Jones and old Reuben who pay the freight.'"

The grandfather clause referred to in the governor's statement is the so-called clause in the Georgia reorganization act which permits a governor to scale down appropriations in keeping with available revenue.

ARNALL SAYS SALES TAX "MERELY AN IDLE GESTURE." NEWNAN, Ga., March 3.—Commenting on the general sales tax proposals now pending before the ways and means committee of the Georgia house of representatives, Ellis Arnall, speaker pro tem, said here today that "these proposals are merely idle gestures and would, in my opinion, be vetoed by Governor Talmadge if passed."

Arnall, leader of the successful fight in the general assembly of 1933 against the sales tax, stated: "The farmers of this state, the laboring people and the great army of unemployed would not only have to pay this tax but would also pay the profits that the merchants will exact from them on account of this tax." He pointed out that the assembly had voted to let the assembly decide whether the masses of Georgians will be deceived by this effort to shift the burden of taxation onto the backs of the poor.

MAN HELD AS BANDIT RELEASED BY POLICE. Charges of "suspicion of attempted robbery" which were placed against W. A. Morgan, 32, of a Briarcliff road address, Saturday night were dropped Sunday at the request of Mrs. Ora Wall, who Saturday night said Morgan attempted to rob the Wall Dry Cleaning plant at 1060 St. Charles avenue, N. E.

Detectives booked Morgan Sunday for being drunk and disorderly and set his trial for Tuesday afternoon in recorder's court. Mrs. Wall told detectives she did not believe Morgan had attempted to rob the dry cleaning plant but that he was drunk.

CANADIAN BUSINESS PACING U. S. GAINS, SAYS BANKER HERE

Business conditions in Canada are keeping step with those of the United States, Iredell K. Johnston, of Toronto, supervisor of the Imperial Bank of Canada, who is visiting his cousin, S. I. Parker, of 813 Sherwood road, said Sunday.

Canadian agriculture, he said, was thriving, as the Canadian government had inaugurated a system of market supervision similar to that effected by the agricultural adjustment administration.

Mr. Johnston is a native of Canada, but his father was a member of a pioneer Eaton (N. C.) family.

His visit to Atlanta marks his first trip south of Washington. He expects to remain in Atlanta for two or three days, during which time he said he would meet and talk with local bankers.

Discussing banking, Mr. Johnston said there were only eight banks in Canada, but there are hundreds of branches throughout the dominion. His bank, he said, has approximately 200 branches.

GOTHAM SMASHES COUNTERFEIT RING

$250,000 in Imitation "Nickels" Said To Have Been Distributed.

NEW YORK, March 3.—(AP)—A counterfeit ring which government agents said had flooded five states in the last year and a half with $200,000 to $250,000 of fake five-cent pieces, was smashed today with the arrest of three men in a farm house near Goshen, N. Y.

Directed by Alan G. Straight, chief of treasury department agents in New York, a raiding force waited all night at the house in Chester township and arrested Louis Ehlers, 42, who said he was a garage mechanic, and Leo Galie, 39, machinist, who were found in the building. Both said they lived in Florida, a small town near Goshen. The third man, who gave the name of George Ehlers, 40, brother of Louis, was arrested when he arrived in an automobile bearing a Delaware license. Three hydraulic presses, one of four and a half tons, with a total capacity, the agents said, of 15,000 to 20,000 nickels a day, were found in the basement of the abandoned farmhouse. Metal lathes, a gasoline power plant and other tools were in a completely equipped machine shop.

A large quantity of nickel silver, cost a fraction of a cent for each "nickel" produced, between 2,800 and 3,000 newly finished coins and from 8,000 to 10,000 slugs ready for stamping were seized. The coins, the agents said, were a "nearly perfect" imitation of the buffalo nickel and bore the dates of 1925, 1927 and 1929.

The ring functioned, it was declared, through highly organized distributing agents who bought the coins at 50 cents on the dollar. For a year and a half, Straight said, complaints have been received from New York, New Jersey, Connecticut, Pennsylvania and Delaware of the circulation of counterfeit nickels so nearly like those minted by the government that they frequently escaped detection.

"Jesus' Closest Relative" Is Discussed by Dr. Duncan

Dr. W. A. Duncan, pastor of the First Baptist church of East Point, shown in his pulpit. Staff photo.

Editor's Note:—The Constitution this morning presents the eighth of a series of features dealing with Atlanta ministers and their sermons. On succeeding Monday mornings, other clergymen will be shown in their pulpits, together with abstracts of their messages.

Dr. W. A. Duncan, pastor of the First Baptist church, of East Point, preached Sunday on "Jesus' Closest Relative." He used as his text the following, from Matthew 12:48-50: "Who is my mother and who are my brethren? For whosoever shall do the will of my Father which is in heaven, he is my brother, and sister, and mother." An abstract of his sermon follows:

"This question, 'Who is my mother, and who are my brethren?' was provoked under very interesting circumstances. Jesus was in the midst of a fierce battle with sin and disease on the one hand and with his life-long enemy, the Pharisees, on the other. The zeal of Jesus was running so high that reports were circulated that he was 'beside himself.' This report, together with the intensity of the opposition to Jesus, led His earthly mother and brothers in the flesh to seek to get Him alone from the multitude. And one said unto Him, 'Behold, thy mother and thy brethren stand without, seeking to speak to thee.' But he answered and said unto him that told Him, 'Who is my mother and who are my brethren?' And He stretched forth His hand toward His disciples, and said: 'Behold my mother and my brethren! For whosoever shall do the will of my Father who is in heaven he is my brother, and sister, and mother.' Jesus, knowing fully all that was in the minds of all present, virtually said: 'The claims of human relationship may be great, but I am working to establish a kinship which is infinitely greater than the ties of the flesh. My closest relative is the man, the woman, who joins with me the most perfectly in obedience to the will of God.'

Family Relationships.
"1. Jesus' High Estimate of Family Relationships. We should in the beginning be warned against the belief that Jesus here places a low estimate on our earthly family kinship and relationships. For He, everywhere in His teachings, gives great emphasis to the importance of the family ties. In His home at Nazareth He was 'subject unto his parents.' He taught men to pray, 'Our Father.' In regard to marriage He said, 'They twain shall become one flesh.' When he interpreted His relationship to His church He used the romantic terms 'bride' and 'groom.' If He had held a low estimate of family ties He never would have given such strong emphasis to the doctrine of the brotherhood of man. No one can ever think that Jesus ever disregarded or held in low esteem human kinship so long as those touching words which He spoke from the Cross are in mind, 'Mother, behold thy son, son, behold thy mother.' In fact, Jesus held such high ideals concerning home ties that His great heart must bleed today when He visits our divorce courts and sees the valleys of sorrow caused by low ideals which our generation entertains concerning family relationships.

"2. A Still Higher Kinship. While Jesus did have such a high estimate of human kinship, in our text, He unhesitatingly exalted spiritual kinship manifested by doing the will of the Father to the most sublime place. The fact that He did in so many ways highly exalt the family relationships during His life, makes us better understand the tremendous importance of this spiritual kinship which this text exalts so much higher. Jesus was, therefore, not 'beside himself.' His zeal for a spiritual kingdom was not born of insanity. He saw men in His day, as we can see them today, wedded to their idols, giving their lives for the chaff of life, lost in the love of the things of the flesh, blinded by the demands of human kinship, and unmindful of the reality of the supremely greater spiritual kinship which is manifested by 'obedience to the will of the Father.' Jesus' zeal was born of His feeling of loneliness with His great spiritual ideal in the midst of a people with such superficial conceptions of religion and of life. Jesus' consuming passion was that He might do the perfect will of the Father.

"And He firmly declared to His dear earthly mother, to His brothers in the flesh, and to the multitude there assembled that the person who joins Him in this supreme passion to 'do the will of the Father' has reached the kinship sublime! If we ministers and church leaders today would see with greater clearness what Jesus saw that day and would unleash our zeal to the extent that this world today, which is blinded by false notions of culture and refinement, would be tempted more to charge that we too are 'beside ourselves' the Kingdom of God would move more speedily.

How To Achieve Kinship.
"3. How is this kinship to be had? Someone may be tempted to think that the 'obedience' to the Father's will is the answer. This is true, however, only if obedience is taken in its broadest meaning to include everything which is taught in His Word. Strictly speaking, Jesus here is speaking of obedience as the manifestation of spiritual kinship and not of its cause. No. For a man who is lost in sin simply to determine to do the good things which are taught in God's Word is not sufficient to bring to him the incomparably precious and necessary kinship with Christ. That would be seeking the fruits of salvation without the roots of salvation, and it is manifestly impossible to

MORE THAN 87 PCT. OF U. S. FAMILIES READ NEWSPAPERS

NEW YORK, March 3.—(AP)—An independent consumer survey of 15 cities in the United States shows more than 87 per cent of the families in these cities regularly read a newspaper, the bureau of advertising of the American Newspaper Publishers' association announced today.

The bureau found the figure rises to "well over 90 per cent" in some individual cities, and concludes that an "average" newspaper list "would reach almost 100 per cent of the leading buying power groups."

Where magazines are considered essential in an advertising program, the bureau said, better coverage can be achieved by limiting to a few the list of magazines, and adding some newspaper circulation. The survey shows five magazines plus one newspaper per city studied reach almost 50 per cent more families than a list of 17 magazines alone.

DR. H. W. COX HEADS WESLEY CHURCH DRIVE
Dr. Harvey W. Cox, president of Emory University, has accepted the chairmanship of the executive committee of the Wesley Memorial campaign board, it has been announced by Bishop Warren A. A FAIR PROPOSITION

The strike at the Callaway mills at LaGrange, one of the largest textile plants of the South, is to be regretted.

While only a portion of the employees are out, those calling the strike take the position that their action is in protest to the adoption by the mills of what is known as the Beadeux system, which they hold is unjust to the workers.

President Cason Callaway, of the Callaway mills, Sunday telegraphed Secretary of Labor Perkins at Washington, stating that the purpose of the mills in putting wages above the guaranteed minimum, based on the Beadeux system, is to make possible the payment of higher wages to many of the operatives.

He submits to the labor department the proposition that the mills are ready, on notice from the department, to abandon the Beadeux system and pay only the exact requirements of the textile code.

This leaves to the department of labor the solution of the unfortunate controversy which has arisen at the mills. If it decides that the Beadeux system should be abandoned and payment based on the government code substituted, the mills will act accordingly on being notified to do so, even though this would mean a decrease in the pay of some of the operatives of the plant.

This develops an interesting situation and the reply of the department of labor will have important bearing upon the settlement of the strike.

Naturally the operatives will not favor reduction in the wage scale in any particular, although if the department determines that the code scale must be strictly observed, despite the higher payments of the Beadeux system, neither employees nor the corporation would have a right to complain so long as the requirements of the code are adhered to.

At any rate, the position taken by President Callaway brings the situation to a head and it is to be hoped that it will result in definite action one way or the other, enabling the striking operatives to return to work.

KEEPING INTEREST AT HOME

An important phase of the insured mortgage issued under section two of the FHA is that the interest paid on such mortgages, now going largely to corporations outside the communities in which the loans are made, remains at home.

Especially is this true in Georgia, where because of the small number of building and loan associations the great majority of mortgages are held by large insurance companies of the country. The result is that every month many thousands of dollars go out of Georgia in the shape of interest on mortgages.

The FHA mortgage plan does not make use of federal money. The loans are made by local financial institutions and are guaranteed by the government. Thus, there is the double benefit of refinancing for the property owner and the use of home money, largely idle now, for local mortgage loans.

The insured mortgage plan was slow to get started but is now registering rapid progress. More than 2,500 financial institutions throughout the country are actively co-operating and thousands of applications for loans are now being passed on.

The plan can be made beneficial not only to those who desire to own their own homes but to builders, realtors and those having money to invest in loans on improved real estate.

A WORTHY MEASURE

The Burgin resolution submitting a constitutional amendment providing for the removal of purely local bills from the deliberations of the general assembly has been favorably reported. It is a worthy measure.

Under the constitution all changes in the charter of local governments must be authorized by the general assembly. As a result each session of the legislature is cluttered up with innumerable local bills and the printed proceedings are loaded down with these measures.

The proceedings of the last session of the general assembly are contained in a volume of 1253 pages, but only 284 pages are devoted to the publication of general laws affecting the whole state. All the rest of the volume is devoted to local laws.

In the 1933 session 33 laws affecting various city courts alone were enacted, most of them referring to the salaries of the judges, and another large group authorized the abolition of some of the courts. Others of the bills bear on such unimportant matters, from the standpoint of the state as a whole, as the adjustment of local salaries, the selection of depositories for local funds and the bonds to be given by sheriffs. The general assembly was even called on to authorize the appointment of a clerk to the board of commissioners of one of the smallest counties in the state.

A few decades ago the general assembly had by law to charter railroads. Many of them were only a few miles in length, but each had to be acted on separately and the legislative acts of those days were cluttered up with such charters.

The legislature solved this problem by enacting a law outlining the general conditions under which such charters could be granted, and giving authority to the secretary of state to grant them within the limitations of the law.

The situation with reference to the avalanche of local bills now flooding each session is worse, and it should be solved in the same practical manner in which the general assembly relieved itself of the unnecessary task of passing on innumerable and identical charters of new railroads.

Although the members of the legislature go through the form of acting upon the various local bills, they are to all intents and purposes decided locally as by general consent the legislature approves all bills upon which the members of the house and senate from the community affected are in agreement. The action is controlled locally, therefore, the only difference being that it is determined by two or three members of the legislature.

The procedure is useless, expensive and out of line with the modern trend that places on each community the responsibility for the conduct of its own affairs. State after state has taken this action, and Georgia should take the same step without further delay.

The Burgin resolution entrusts an amendment providing for the enactment of a general law that will permit the "enactment of local or special laws by the several counties and municipalities to be affected thereby," the only restriction being that these laws shall be subject to the provisions of the state constitution. It authorizes a referendum to the voters.

A similar measure was overwhelmingly passed by the senate in 1927, but failed to come up for action in the house incident to the confusion of the closing days.

The status is still quo in the G. O. P. The Old Guard has no intention of surrendering, and Mr. Borah is quite dissatisfied and happy.

Power interests in the south have trouble holding the dike against the TVA. When last seen they were stuffing the United States constitution into a crack.

We have not gone as far as Russia in declaring the profit motive a hanging offense. The worst we can say for it is that it is a mirage.

Chemist Willard Dow has extracted gold from ocean water. We shall resent, though, any offer of the Bay of Biscay in settlement of the French debt.

It is always Japan, not Manchukuo, that insists Manchukuo is free, as one never hears a ventriloquist's dummy discussing home rule.

A civilized nation is one where they muzzle all dogs but permit a drunken man to drive an automobile.

It's very hard for some people to remain collected. In fact, you can't collect anything from some folks.

It will be fine when they retire some movie plots on old-age pensions.

THE WORLD'S WINDOW

By PIERRE VAN PAASSEN.

The Belief In Immortality.

Women were making wreaths of wild flowers and chains of colored amulets to place around the necks of the dead children who were to be buried that day when we passed through the village of Omea in French Nigeria. In the hands of two youngsters even the playthings of their childhood were to be placed in the grave with them. Leather dolls they were, and small mirrors and arrows. This was proof, of course, that these primitive tribes have a belief in immortality, or at least that man survives existing after death in some form or other.

If I needed further proof of this belief, I soon got it when I learned that a number of dogs were to be killed and buried with the boys. I did not see the dogs killed. You see, my chauffeur and bodyguard, the ceremony. He has an iron stomach and nerves of steel, that fellow. I had not the least desire to witness the slaughter. I have a weakness for dogs. I think they are the most sympathetic of our animal friends. Man and dog belong together. They entered history together. Through storm and stress, through foul weather and fair, the canine has accompanied us from the days when we first began to walk erect.

Yet, I will go further. I am sure you have heard and now, while I am on the subject of animals, that I disagree most decidedly with those theologians who assume that there are no souls. How do they know? Tombs have been discovered in Europe, for instance, the tomb of the Man of La Chapelle. The skeletons there were probably 50,000 years old, perhaps older. The skeletons were of creatures who had not quite reached the stage of manhood. They were upright, they were intelligent, they were not quite human yet, and still they were far above the animals. Yet, here is the point I want to make. In those tombs were weapons and decorations and crockery which had once contained food. This means, undisputedly, of course, that these creatures, half-man, half-animal, had a belief that they went on existing after death, that they needed those weapons and decorations and that food in the crockery.

In other words, backward creatures like that as the Man of the Sainte Chapelle believed in the immortality of the soul. Clearly these creatures were closely akin to man. They were half-animals themselves. Slowly, slowly, for do not forget in this realm, 1,000 years is as a day, slowly they began to walk upright, they began to use tools, they began to make physical human beings, the ancestors of the peoples now living on the earth. But their souls did not suddenly come into existence when they started to walk upright. No, the soul was there all the time, in principle. The soul also developed, just as the body. When they were near the animal state, they had souls. That is why I say that in principle, mark well in principle, animals also have souls.

But that belief in immortality. You find it everywhere. Strange, isn't it? Really, the more I think about it, the more I believe it instinctively. The word instinctive is derived from the Latin verb instigare, which means to goad, to urge, to incite. It is really a miniature sawed-off stick. Whether this is true, or not, it is well known that another of Huey's gun servants carries a leaden cane for blackjack work on all social occasions.

These precautions are unusual, but not entirely superfluous.

HEALTH TALKS

By DR. WILLIAM BRADY.

LATENT SCURVY.

Popular conceptions of scurvy are rather apocryphal. Lind, a surgeon in the British navy, was the first to recognize that scurvy could be prevented or cured by orange juice and lemon juice or lime juice. In the middle of the 18th century lime juice became an important part of the sailor's ration. Prior to that time scurvy had been the scourge of the sea, often disabling the entire ship's crew on long voyages and many of the victims died.

When I was an interne in a large metropolitan hospital typical cases of scurvy in infants were not uncommon. The infants were fed with boiled milk modified, but we did not then know that all babies require tomato juice or fresh fruit juice. The fresh fruit juice did the trick. No longer be bothered by the scurvy of the sea, but the fresh fruit juice given instead. Now we know that fresh fruit contains some vitamin C. Scurvy is destroyed by par-boiling (Pasteurizing).

Scurvy is most likely to occur when the baby is from seven to 10 months old. The baby becomes fretful, pale and tender in the legs, so that he cries out when handled, and soon this soreness is evident in knees and ankles. The gums become purple, swollen, tender, and bleed on the slightest touch. The baby is cross, sleepless, loses color and weight, has little or no appetite. If the nature of the trouble is not recognized, the fresh fruit or vegetable juices given, the baby becomes feverish and lies as though paralyzed. Small or large "black-and-blue" marks appear on the skin, suggesting to the uninitiated observer the bruises of blows. These discolorations have led to many unjust charges of cruelty to patients in hospitals.

In adults the early signs of scurvy are listless, lack of energy, mental and physical failure, irritability, and later loss of weight, weakness and pallor. The ankles and sometimes the joints become tender and swollen. Hemorrhages appear on the skin, producing "black-and-blue" marks. Ulcerations and hemorrhages of the mouth and other surfaces. The gums are swollen and bleed easily; the teeth become loose and may fall out. Headache and other nervous symptoms occur.

Latent scurvy is more difficult to recognize. According to Heas ("Scurvy Past and Present," Lippincott) suspicion of latent scurvy should be awakened by failure to grow and develop properly, slight pallor, poor appetite and rapid pulse and rapid respiration.

McCullum tells of a prep school where laziness, listlessness, lack of pep and lackwaddiness was widespread. The diet lacked fruits and green vegetables. The boys immediately improved in all respects when foods supplying an abundance of vitamin C were given.

Insufficient vitamin C is a fruitful source of dental disease and malformation. Tomato or tomato juice, fresh or factory canned, is at least equal to orange and orange juice in vitamin C content and the prevention and cure of scurvy.

News Behind the News

By Paul Mallon.

STALLING

WASHINGTON, March 3.—The disorderly sub-surface situation of legislation in Congress is worse than you have heard.

Democratic congressional leaders, never very enthusiastic, have lately shown inward signs of discouragement. The liberals who have been very co-operative with the New Deal, have become personally embittered about the relief wage dispute. Conservative democrats and republicans privately admit that they would be satisfied now to adjourn and go home.

President Roosevelt still holds the reins but he has not been pulling them. The result has been a lot of bucking and stalling. No important legislation has been passed in the first two months of the session.

Things are rapidly working around to the place where Mr. Roosevelt will have to go out on the wagon tongue and mend the traces. Unless he does, no one can tell where his legislative program will wind up.

CHANCES

Assuming that he will, the prospects of pending important legislation may safely be outlined as follows: Bonus—A veto would be sustained today. Split between Vinson and Patman plans is musing up whatever chances the bonuses had.

NRA—In grave doubt. Influential senators are secretly bent on killing it. New Dealers may not be able to keep senate hearings in hand. Mr. Roosevelt will have more trouble with his proposed moderate reformation than he is having with relief.

Social Security—Rates will be boosted, legislation moderately liberalized. Skeleton of Roosevelt proposal will be maintained. Thirty-Hour Week—No chance.

Holding Companies—Believe it or not, Mr. Roosevelt's recommendations may be moderated slightly. Certain liberals who have been fighting utilities all their lives are privately against going as far as he wants to go. Slightly moderated bill will pass.

Silver and Inflation—Increased agitation on these two subjects will start soon, but no action is expected in congress. Banking Bill—It will pass after Senator Glass has rewritten some of it with the consent of the New Dealers, and some without.

Wagner Labor Bill—No hope. Taxation—A small tax bill will probably be jammed through late in the session. It may contain some unexpected punitive taxes. No general increase.

Railroads—The Eastman plan is being delayed until the holding companies bill is passed. That means it will be thrown up against the end of the session. Prospects are not now clear.

Adjournment—Mid-June at the earliest, probably later.

LET-UP Incoming mail on the Townsend plan is beginning to fall off. A western senator says he received 300 to 400 letters a day until recently when the deluge trickled to a mere 150. A few days ago a petition containing 116,000 signatures was presented to a house member.

Strangely, this mail is not having much influence. Congressmen say they realize how easy it is to promote letters and petitions when a question of getting $200 a month from the government is involved. Most of these letters are based on the fact that the people need the money. If that were the only question, congress would be unanimously for the plan.

As it is, probably two-thirds of both houses consider it absolutely unworkable. They look on Dr. Townsend as a sincere but misguided man.

LET-DOWN There can be no question that the mail man let Mr. Roosevelt down in the wage relief dispute. The president's pals say it was because the country did not understand the issue, that he did not handle his publicity the way he should have. They thought it was a very bad slip when Hyde Park sources announced a deluge of approving letters one day and had to modify the statement later.

The hidden factor seems to have been that Mr. Roosevelt was fighting organized labor minorities who could not send mail, whereas, he had to rely on voluntary contributions which he made no effort to stimulate.

ARMAMENT One of Huey's friends vouches for the fact that one of his bodyguards, a state policeman, carries a double-barreled, double-banded pistol about 18 inches long. It is really a miniature sawed-off stick. Huey's guard is said to wrap it in newspapers to conceal it on occasions, leaving only the trigger outside for use.

Whether this is true, or not, it is well known that another of Huey's gun servants carries a leaden cane for blackjack work on all social occasions.

These precautions are unusual, but not entirely superfluous.

NOTES Mr. Roosevelt did not appear to be very happy immediately after his return from Hyde Park. Neither did one of his congressional leaders, who called on him next day and emerged without his temper, which has not been found.

A few political unknowns from the financial world have been canvassing the latter situation in Washington lately with a view to starting a third party movement. They have been seeking a tie-up with a soldiers' organization, but will not get it.

The only senator who suffered very much from White House heat on the relief matter is from a city where citizens called a mass-meeting to uphold the president. The next day he wanted to compromise.

If You Keep Bees Where There Are No Flowers, You Have To Feed Them

By Robert Quillen

If you think artificial schemes can make times good in violation of economic law, you won't like this.

If you prefer facing the truth, even when it isn't pretty, a good look at the facts may help you to have a cellar ready when the storm comes. Can you remember the war period? We had a boom then—jobs and high wages for everybody. But it wasn't natural. We were supplying the world because Europe's men were otherwise engaged.

Along about 1920 we had another silk-shirt boom that made everybody feel rich, but it wasn't natural, either. Everybody was buying on States, counties and cities issued bonds for improvements. When that boom exploded, we were broke. But bank examiners were good fellows; credit was expanded some more; and we had another and bigger boom. You know the finish of that one.

These booms—all the result of squandering borrowed money—made a big demand for manufactured goods, provided jobs for all town people, and persuaded farmers to quit the plow and move to town.

FAIR ENOUGH

By WESTBROOK PEGLER

F. D. R. Out Of Rabbits?

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 3.—It has been a long time since a rabbit out of the hat and the unhappy suspicion begins to dawn that the last run out of rabbits. That would be very bad because the act still has a considerable time to run and the customers might become bored and start walking out or uttering disparaging remarks. For that matter, a number of the customers have actually been edging up the aisle lately, not running, to be sure, but certainly on the move toward the nearest exit and remarks are beginning to be heard of a character quite shocking by comparison with the hallooing that greeted the president when he first came to town.

As long as it lasted, the Roosevelt act, including the family and the sunny smile as well as the mystifying feats of the New Deal, was a fascinating entertainment which held the citizens enthralled and, except when they broke into cheers, silent. There were Sissy and Buzze and the dog that took a bite out of Mrs. Senator Carraway, and the Roosevelt boys with their high-spirited independence and mischief. Mrs. Roosevelt went around snapping precedents like "breaking sticks" as the country phrase goes, and there was the novelty of the ladies' gridiron dinner, where you could call it a dinner or an evening in innocent merriment, charades, riddles and games while the president, himself, went down to the Willard hotel to spill salt and crack a harelamb, banquet roll with the white ties of the Fourth Estate. There was Mrs. Roosevelt's little blue car which she scooted around the city streets, as unassuming as any lady by the name of Mrs. Jones that ever you saw in your life.

Then there was the big parade which was the emotional high-spot of the Roosevelt New Deal. The big parade has been all but forgotten by now but you may remember that it was a national parade and that in New York, for example, they got a couple of good-looking young women to ride on a float to start things off and then followed by a crowd of citizens on foot, on horseback, on wheels, on rollerskates, on crutches and square cap laborers and a detachment from Governors Island turned out to march in the parade.

And you mustn't forget repeal. Repeal of the prohibition law in the early days of the New Deal, although the deciding vote caught the purveyors of flat-tired and compelled the citizens to turn out their old speakeasies where they were told that no liquor was to be had. The speakeasies turned down their old customers that night and they hadn't yet received their licenses and it was against the law to sell anything until they did receive them.

Now General Johnson is gone and, so, too, is the repeal of prohibition. The repeal of prohibition has been written in his memoirs of the NRA which give the impression of an obituary for the repeal of prohibition. The repeal of prohibition may go on the air for occasional fireless chats and there is no doubt it will do some good in the way of reviving the faintest of memories of the citizens but the truth is that they are becoming restless, like children who have played with a mechanical frog until the spring has burst and then a child grows tired of a fascinating toy and pukes up its face and begins to yell for an ice cream cone which he might as well have.

It does seem too bad that Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Farley guessed as they did in the case of Huey Long because Huey would be a great help inside the administration and he is becoming day by day a greater nuisance outside. Probably somebody knows only what started the trouble. It is popularly supposed to have begun one night just before coronation day when Huey, slightly plastered as was more or less usual with him, went to a party and was horned through a crowd in the corridor outside Mr. Roosevelt's quarters at the Mayflower hotel and hammered on Mr. Roosevelt's door with his walking cane. They let him in but he came out quite soon looking as though he had received a competent beating and he had been on the door and showing up in that condition.

This poisoned Huey and his resentment became more and more open until, to put him in his place, they took his jobs away from him. A senator without any jobs to give away ordinarily would be ruined but Huey was more resourceful so he turned to politics and religion and went about taking over the state of Louisiana for himself. In this way he has made his own job for his own people and he has made Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Farley, who are supposed to be politicians, in the position of sponsors for some gang-banger politicians and Louisiana who are just as bad as Huey says they are.

Now Huey has them on the defensive. Even the man Bilbo who was elected senator from Mississippi as a counter irritant to Huey seems afraid to tangle with him. They have thought that the man Bilbo was one man who could fight Huey his own way and they still look him to do so but the man Bilbo is taking a long time getting his end up. He might even jump the fence and throw in with Huey and that, my friends, would be something for American history.

If Mr. Roosevelt could only reach into that hat and pull out one more rabbit.

CALLAWAY AGREES TO FLAT PAY RATE IN ALL HIS MILLS

Twenty-five were named for duty, to be ready for call.

The Callaway telegram follows in full:

"LaGrange, Ga., March 3, 1935. 'Madam Frances Perkins, Secretary of Labor, 'Washington, D. C. 'In a desire to make our position clear in the present labor situation at Callaway mills, our only purpose in paying wages above the guaranteed minimum based on the Beadeux system is to enable us to pay many of our operators higher wages.

"If the department of labor desires it, we will be glad to discontinue all reference to the Beadeux system in determining wage scale or otherwise and pay only the exact requirements of the code as determined by any properly constituted authority.

"(Signed) CASON CALLAWAY, 'President, Callaway Mills."

Jackson Tells 'Inside Story' Of Milk Price-Fixing Battle

Jensen's Removal Postponed To Insure No Loss Of Votes For Senatorial Candidate.

Note: This is the second of a series of five articles in which the inside story of the recent "purging" in the AAA is told by the deposed senior assistant to the consumers' counsel, presenting the viewpoint of the "Young New Dealers."

By GARDNER JACKSON.

WASHINGTON, March 3.—Perhaps no industry better illustrates the way policies are made and unmade in the New Deal than the milk industry. Certainly no other industry has brought more grief to the agricultural following of Roosevelt than the milk industry. President Roosevelt himself has been troubled by the milk problem. The issue in the early stages of the New Deal he expressed the hope to certain of his agricultural officials that some representative city would be found willing to undertake municipal distribution of milk and thus apply the same "yardstick methods" to milk distribution costs that he hopes to apply to electricity rates through the Tennessee Valley Authority and other power developments.

Major Trial to New Deal.

The milk industry should be a major trial to the New Deal. Milk and dairy products represent one-fourth of the farmer's income in this country, and their sale is one of the most important factors in the life of the farmer and more readily seen than the stages followed by most other agricultural commodities.

It was a large factor in the ousting of Jerome Frank, general counsel of the AAA, and his associates, in the decision of Dr. Frederic C. Howe as consumers' counsel, and in the subsequent forcing out of Victor A. Christgau, former republican congressman from Minnesota, as assistant administrator.

The fact is that the milk industry—the dealers and the heads of the bargaining committees—has been a major trial to the New Deal. The election of the men in the AAA who, they decided, must be fired.

A hint of the explicit intention of Charles Holman, head of the National Federation of Dairy Co-operators, and of his associates and the dealers to force a complete reorganization of the milk policy by the AAA—including the list of men slated for head-hopping—was submitted in writing to Chester C. Davis, the administrator of the milk policy, in an official letter of the consumers' counsel to whom it was referred. And it was conveyed by me in conversation to Secretary Wallace.

There were two complaints regarding co-operative leaders who Secretary Wallace, through the fertile word-conjuring of Alfred D. Stedman, forced to resign. One was that they had divided information of the AAA, had labeled in a bitter press release less than a year before as "distributors masquerading in overalls," and they set out to undo the damage done to their pocketbooks and reputations by the policy the secretary enunciated following the resignation of Administrator George Peek and the ousting of Clyde L. King as head of the dairy section.

That policy abandoned King's marketing agreement program, fixing resale prices to consumers and guaranteeing handsome margins to the distributors (with an official of a big dairy corporation sitting in an office adjoining King's advising him). It substituted a license policy fixing prices to producers and letting the forces of competition in the dairy markets regulate the margins.

Revised Policy.

Under the revised policy, milk administrators were appointed to various major cities where licenses were put in. One of these administrators was Einar Jensen, a ruralized Dane brought up in great help in the cooperative movement, who had finished off his practical farming experience with studies at the University of Minnesota and then at Harvard in agricultural economics.

Jensen, a member of the consumers' counsel staff, was appointed administrator of the dairy section in Vermont. He was a religious man, who adhered religiously to the terms of the licenses, playing no favorites, forcing one of the large milk distributors to pay within a week when it threatened not to do so, and winning the trust of the farmers in New England. His name headed the list of those slated for firing in the bargaining co-operative leaders, "the distributors masquerading in overalls," and the dealers with whom they operate closely.

When it appeared certain that Arthur H. Lauterbach, chief of the dairy section, was about to remove Jensen, I expressed my profound concern to Secretary Wallace in a letter in which I said Jensen's removal was merely the first step in a reversion to the policy which the secretary had denounced following King's removal. He showed the letter to Mr. Davis and then summoned me. He agreed with me that Jensen was the highest type of public servant, a man of integrity and high character, a man who was present in his job, but said he could not afford to override Administrator Davis—virtually the same attitude the secretary had regarding the removal of Frank—and that Davis insisted Jensen's removal did not mean a reversal of policy.

Removal Postponed.

So well was Jensen regarded by the farmers supplying the Boston market that Emil Hurja, Jim Farley's right-hand man, wrote a letter to AAA officials urging them to postpone Jensen's removal until after the election. Hurja did so at the instance of democratic campaign officials in Vermont, who rallied that Jensen's removal at that time would seriously jeopardize what they considered a good chance of their candidate's winning in that proverbially republican state.

The removal of Jensen was followed in January by the dismissal of R. K. Frank, an extremely conservative man responsible more than any other in the dairy section for working out the revised policy after King's ouster. It was the ultimate elimination of Frank, Howe, Christgau and the others, just as the "distributors masquerading in overalls" had desired.

The AAA pretends that the dairy policy has not been reversed—that there is no consumer price-fixing. Actually, what has happened is that the dairy section try to bring the dealers together to agree on price increases. That's what happened in Boston. While Jensen was still in the dairy chief, and his assistant, Roger Corbett, met the dealers in a Boston hotel room and urged them to join in a price increase.

If price increases are not thus achieved, the dairy section falls back upon the state milk control boards to fix consumer prices. One of the black marks Administrator Davis chalked against me was a talk I had last year with former Governor T. H. Martin of Massachusetts, when the state milk control bill was before him for signature with his provision for consumer price-fixing. Judge O'Brien, his dairy adviser, thought it would be helpful to the governor if I told him of the AAA's experience with price-fixing under Clyde King. I was on vacation at the time and saw no harm in doing so. But I was called on the carpet for it when I returned.

As the policy in operation now works out, every increase of a cent a quart in the producer's price of milk means a half-cent to the farmer and a half-cent to the distributor. The consumers' counsel's position was that if an increase to the farmer is justified, he should get all of it and that the distributor's margin should not be widened.

The bureau of agricultural economics reports that 15,318,580,000 quarts of fluid milk and cream were consumed in 1933. An increase of one cent a quart over the country would mean an increase in returned producer and distributor of over $135,000,000. No wonder there is a back-scratching relationship between the bargaining co-operative leaders, the masqueraders, and the dealers. And no wonder that they publicly gloat over the "purging" of the AAA.

4 GEORGIANS DIE IN AUTO ACCIDENTS

Eleven Others Injured in Sunday Crashes Throughout State.

LYONS, Ga., March 3.—(P)—Anthony Durden, 65-year-old merchant, of Vidalia, and his wife were instantly killed in an automobile accident on United States Highway No. 1, 15 miles north of Lyons at 4:30 p. m. today.

Mr. and Mrs. Durden were killed when their coupe ran head-on into a sedan driven by Miss Elizabeth Sheffer, of 93 Alouquin avenue, Saranac Lake, N. Y. Mrs. Catherine Scheffer, of the same address, who was riding with her daughter, was critically injured and Miss Scheffer received minor injuries.

The dead and injured were brought to Lyons, and after first aid was rendered by local physicians the injured women were rushed to a hospital in Augusta.

SAVANNAH DIES FOLLOWING CRASH

SAVANNAH, Ga., March 3.—(P)—Charles Gleason, 20, a postoffice employee, was fatally injured before daybreak this morning when a car in which he was a passenger ran into a tree on the Tybee road. The other three occupants of the automobile escaped almost unscathed. H. A. O'Keefe, the driver, said he was blinded by the lights of an approaching car.

BIBB COUNTY OFFICER DIES OF INJURIES

MACON, Ga., March 3.—(P)—Earl T. Moseley, 46, Bibb county police officer, died at 7:30 a. m. today in a local hospital. He was the third county peace officer to succumb to injuries suffered near Haddock late on the night of February 20.

SIX WOMEN ARE INJURED IN CRASH NEAR LINDALE

ROME, Ga., March 3.—Six young women, returning from a rural Sunday school this afternoon, were injured by an automobile that ran off the Rome-Cedartown highway about five miles south of Lindale. After striking the group the car turned over and burned up. A brother of one of the young women, who went to Lindale in his automobile to summon an ambulance, was injured when his car turned over as he was returning to the scene of the accident. He and four of the young women were taken to McCall hospital in the ambulance. Those taken to the hospital were Grady Smith, Maybelle Smith, who suffered severe shock; Claudie Mae Stepp, broken ankle; Cora Mae Duke, broken arm; and Selma Clark, concussion of the brain and bruises.

Fremont Older, Editor, Succumbs in California

SAN FRANCISCO, March 3.—(P)—Fremont Older, 78, editor of the San Francisco Call Bulletin and champion of the cause of Tom Mooney, convicted Preparedness Day parade bomber, collapsed in his automobile and died at Stockton, near here, today.

An active figure in American journalism for more than half a century, Older died in harness.

DREPHAM EMERTON, CAMBRIDGE, MASS., DIES

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., March 3.—(P)—Drepham Emerton, 84, a member of the faculty at Harvard University from 1876 until his retirement in 1918, died at his home here today.

MRS. W. A. CURLEY, MIAMI BEACH, FLA., DIES

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., March 3.—(P)—Mrs. W. A. Curley, wife of the editor of the New York Evening Journal, died here late today after brief illness.

3 Anti-Reds Killed In Mexican Rioting

GUADALAJARA, Mexico, March 3.—(P)—Three persons were killed today and eight wounded when shots were fired into a group of more than 3,000 persons marching through the streets in protest against socialistic education.

Leaders of the demonstrators charged that "red shirts" and police disguised as civilians fired into their closely-packed ranks as they were passing the municipal palace.

Many women and children were among the paraders. As the shots rang out, three men, a lawyer, a student and a farmer, fell dead. Two men and six women were wounded, some seriously.

Police then arrested 38 persons, 22 of them women, as organizers of the demonstration meeting, which they said was held without a permit.

State Deaths And Funerals

MRS. J. M. WILLIAMS. Athens, Ga., March 3.—Mrs. J. M. Williams, 56, wife of a prominent cotton merchant, died early Sunday morning at St. Mary's hospital here after a long illness. Besides her husband she is survived by one brother, Dr. John T. Wages, of Vidalia, and two daughters, Mrs. Helen Williams of Athens, and Mrs. R. E. Canon, wife of Senator R. E. Canon, of Clayton. Funeral services will be held at 3 o'clock Monday afternoon from the First Baptist church in Winder, with Dr. Roy Rhoads, Dr. J. C. Wilkinson, of Athens, and Dr. W. H. Faust, of Atlanta, officiating. Interment will be in Auburn cemetery at Auburn.

FRANK A. DAY. POPES FERRY, Ga., March 3.—Frank A. Day, 82, retired car-builder, died today at his residence here after an illness of three months.

American Missionary Tells Of Flight From Chinese Reds

WUHU, Anhwei Province, China, March 3.—(P)—The Rev. Howard Smith, of Washington, Pa., recuperating from his experiences as a captive of Chinese communists, today told a harrowing tale of his capture and escape.

Smith is one of the few foreigners captured by the reds who lived to tell the tale. He was taken late in 1934 near Foochow, Szechwan province, and held there for two months by the army of the notorious red general Ho Lung, now hard-pressed by government troops near the Honan-Szechwan border.

He escaped one night while a guard slept and reached safety, famished and exhausted, after a ten-day journey. He narrowly escaped death several times.

Smith still shows effects of nervous shock. Relating his experiences he declined to tell of everything he saw, declaring some were too ghastly to narrate.

He said the reds treated him fairly well and were hopeful of obtaining ransom, but he was certain death awaited him if the exorbitant ransom demands were not satisfied. He declared Ho Lung's troops were among the best disciplined of the scattered red armies infesting this area.

HOPE IS ABANDONED FOR ANOTHER MISSIONARY. SICHUAN, Szechwan Province, China, March 3.—(P)—The China inland mission revealed today that hope has been virtually abandoned for both the Rev. S. C. French, Australian mission worker, and his London wife, who are feared to have fallen into the hands of red bandits.

The mission received a telegram from Fengshien today indicating that two British missionaries who set out to search for Mrs. French in the mountains of this province have abandoned the hunt.

"The worst is feared for the fate of Mrs. French," they wired.

COMPROMISE SEEN ON RELIEF WAGES

Roosevelt May Take Issue to People To Speed Action.

WASHINGTON, March 3.—(P)—A break in the deadlock over the $4,880,000,000 work relief bill is expected in the senate this week by democratic leaders to release the legislative jam on administration proposals.

Responding to White House pressure, some democratic backers of the bill, the Senate Committee on Education and Labor, today announced that they are willing to back a compromise that will give them a cushion to fall upon.

Word was passed over the weekend that President Roosevelt is more determined than ever to defeat the amendment, which would force payment of the same wages to relief workers as to those employed in private industry.

The possibility that President Roosevelt may take the issue to the country in a nation-wide broadcast was hinted at again today in administration circles.

President Impatient. Persons close to the White House indicated today that Mr. Roosevelt had become a bit impatient over the slowness of congress in handling his proposals, and that he may resort to open "big-stick" measures.

Democratic leaders in both the senate and house have been worried over the lack of response the administration measures have received. They are looking to the president for help. Unless the deadlock is broken soon on the work relief bill, and administration-opposed bills such as the cash payment of the soldiers' bonus are blocked, party chieftains may have even more difficulty in the future.

Leaving the administration's social security program—company measure to the work relief bill clogged in the senate appropriations committee—the house will consider this week the cash bonus bill. Even Speaker Byrnes has conceded it will pass that branch. It will go to the senate, where Senator Bulow, democrat, South Dakota, plans to tack it onto the relief measure.

Other Action Slated. The house also will act this week on repeal of the "pink slips" giving information for public scrutiny on the incomes of taxpayers. The senate, which originally adopted the proposal, is unfriendly to the repeal move.

Little progress has been made on the Rayburn-Wheeler bill to outlaw utility holding companies. A senate investigation is to be started this week on the NRA in connection with

U. S. Offers Refunding Issues At Lowest Yield Since War

WASHINGTON, March 3.—(P)—The treasury tonight followed the administration's desire for lower interest rates by announcing two refunding issues of securities at the lowest yield since long before the World War.

A prime motive behind the refunding, informed quarters said, was—in addition to saving the government money—to help the plan to drive investments into commercial channels through a steady lowering of federal rates.

President Roosevelt has said, however, that he felt interest charges in general were too high.

The treasury proposed to exchange an offering of 20-25-year bonds bearing 7-8 per cent interest for $1,850,000,000 of liberty fourth 4 1-4 call for redemption on April 15; and an issue of 5-year 1 5-8 per cent notes to be offered in exchange for $528,000,000 of treasury 2 1-2 per cent notes which mature on March 15.

It was estimated that swap would save about $30,000,000 in interest annually.

The rates of interest on the note issue is the lowest ever attempted on five-year paper, while the bond rate is the lowest in the memory of the treasury's oldest employees with the exception of some special bonds bearing note circulation privilege, and a few postal savings bonds.

Holders of the called securities are not required to take advantage of the exchange offerings. It was made clear they may demand and receive cash.

The new bonds will be dated March 15, 1935, and will bear interest from that date, payable semi-annually. They will mature March 15, 1960, but may be redeemed at the option of the treasury on and after March 15, 1935.

The notes will be dated March 15, 1935, bearing interest from that date, payable semi-annually. They will mature March 15, 1940, and will not be subject to call for redemption before maturity.

Noted Performers Ready To Open Indoor Circus of Shrine Tonight

The stage is all set for the gala opening tonight of Yaarab temple's big Shrine circus at the city auditorium. Hiram R. Romans, potentate of Yaarab temple, announced Sunday.

Young and old have looked forward with a great deal of anticipation to the Shrine's indoor circus presented by the Shrine. Shrineurs have been selling tickets to the circus for more than four weeks, and the prospects for a record-breaking attendance, they say, are bright.

The Shrine circus is a real circus in every detail. Mickey King, internationally known specialist and successor to the throne vacated by the late Lillian Leitzel, is one of the headliners. "Sandina," heralded as the world's only performing bactrian camel; the Bob Morton menage of horses, featuring a group of lady riders; Harry LePearl, dean of circus clowns, heading a large aggregation of the funsters; Mile. Marie and Pals, trained ponies and dogs, and the Lavenia sisters and the Silverlakes, double trapeze artists, are only a few of the artists who will thrill and entertain the spectators.

Performances will be given every night and matinee will be presented Thursday, Friday and Saturday afternoons.

The Yaarab temple band, under the direction of Noble A. J. Garing, will give a concert tonight before the grand entry. Reserved seat tickets have been placed on sale at Cable Piano Company.

U. S. To Demand Arms Traffic Curb

GENEVA, March 3.—(P)—A real American battle to obtain a worthwhile convention curbing international arms traffic will open tomorrow with the American delegation determined strengthening its original stand.

The Americans consider the amendments submitted by the British tend to weaken the projected convention. The present draft prohibits manufacture of offensive armaments unless the governments grant licenses. Seeking to prevent a piling up of stocks of arms by private companies, the American delegation presented an amendment by which governments would not license manufacturers unless they could show they had bona fide orders.

The president's proposal to extend that agency two additional years.

The National Economy League today sent letters to members of congress urging that the relief bill be reduced, claiming a balanced budget is necessary for recovery.

MRS. JOSEPH WALKER PASSES AT RESIDENCE

Mrs. Joseph M. Walker, wife of the well-known real estate man, died at 9:45 o'clock Sunday night at her residence at 1551 North Morningside drive, N. E.

She had been ill only a short time and was 70 years of age.

Mrs. Walker was born in Marion, Ala., but had resided most of her life in Atlanta. She and her husband, who survives her, also had a home at Lithia Springs.

She was the daughter of Charles and Harriet Haynsworth, who were members of a pioneer Alabama family. She was connected with the Holmes family, of Charleston, S. C., on her maternal side.

Mrs. Walker also is survived by three sons, Joseph S. Walker, well-known building contractor, of Atlanta; C. H. Seals, of Atlanta; and W. O. Seals, of Philadelphia; and three sisters, Mrs. F. A. Robinson, of Atlanta; and Mrs. John Hall and Miss Mary Haynsworth, of Miami, Fla.

Funeral arrangements will be announced by H. M. Patterson & Son.

Vote on Liquor.

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., March 3.—(P)—Leon county, home of the Florida State College for Women and the state's capital, will vote Tuesday in a local option election on whether the sale of intoxicating liquor will be permitted. About 2,000 persons are qualified to vote.

15 LYNCHINGS SHOWN IN CHURCHES' REPORT

NEW YORK, March 3.—(P)—The Federal Council of Churches reported tonight that records of its race relations department showed 15 lynchings in 1934 compared with 28 in 1933.

Despite increased agitation against the practice, however, the council reported there were only 40 states free of lynchings last year, an increase of one over the preceding year.

"After a downward trend from 33 victims in 1923 to 10 in 1929," the report said, "there has been a tendency to increase except in 1932 when there was a decrease to 8 victims. There were 28 victims of lynching in 1933 and 15 in 1934."

"There has been as much savagery in torturing victims as in former years, if not more."

"The determination and spirit of mob have been seen in the large number of attempted lynchings prevented by officers of the law. The failures of the law-abiding citizens in many local areas to wipe out lynching point clearly to the need of national assistance to state and local officers through legislation which will bring federal power to the aid of those officers who struggle to protect life and limb of accused persons."

In a list of the states that had no lynchings last year, the following were omitted: Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, Tennessee and Texas.

WE ASKED OUTDOOR PEOPLE:

"Is this fact important to You?"

"Camels are made from finer, more expensive tobaccos... Turkish and Domestic... than any other popular brand." (SIGNED) R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company WINSTON-SALEM, NORTH CAROLINA

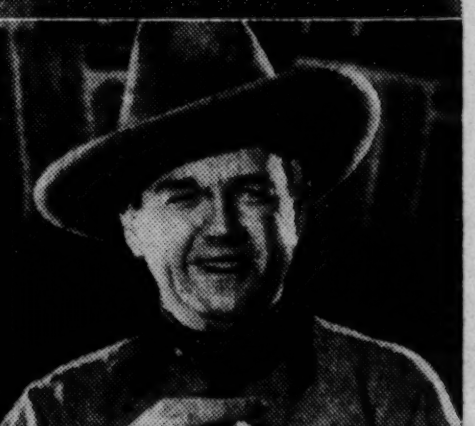

HEALTHY NERVES! "I've smoked Camels for fourteen years, without a sign of upset nerves," says Bill Horn, former Gold Cup winner and outstanding figure in American motorboat racing. "I like Camels and they like me!"

ENERGY! "As a master builder, I have learned that any work that requires 'push' and 'pep' just naturally calls for Camels," comments Frazier Forman Peters. "Camels always give me new energy when I'm feeling tired and listless."

MILDNESS! "Every woman prefers a milder cigarette," says Miss Helene Bradshaw, an enthusiastic horse-woman. "I smoke Camels because they are the only cigarette I've ever found that is mild and pleasing to your throat."

VALUE! "I've visited Winston-Salem—seen how Camels are manufactured," says Charley Belden, who runs the big Pitchfork ranch in Wyoming. "They are made from costlier tobaccos. No wonder Camels have such a rich, cool flavor!"

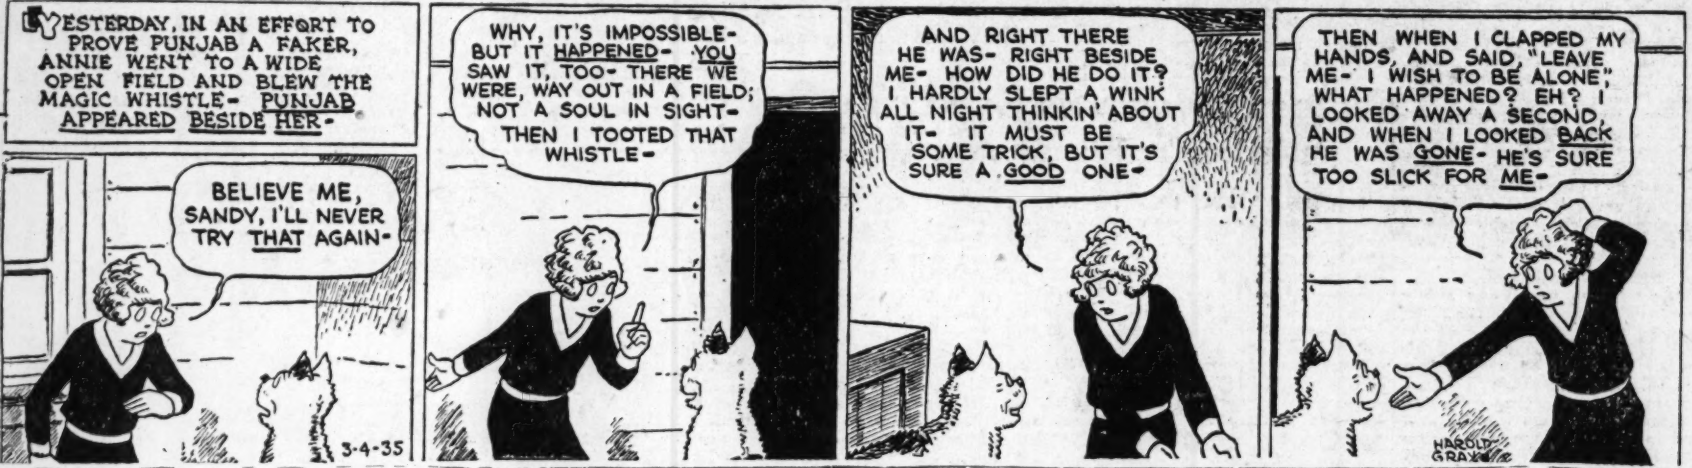

FLAVOR! "It's been thrilling to have a part in the vast enterprise of building Boulder Dam," says Erwin Jones, Boulder Dam engineer. "Plenty of strain. Many long hours of exhausting work—that's the lot of an engineer on this job! Most of us here at Boulder smoke Camels. Man, what a swell taste Camels have! Mild, cool, and mellow! Camels have a flavor that can't be beat. You can tell they are made from choice tobaccos, too, because they don't get 'flat' or tiresome in taste when you smoke a lot."

FOLLIES GIRL

By MARGARET GORHAM NICHOLS

INSTALLMENT XXIX.

Tony watched her put on the little brown hat before the mirror.

"I shall love buying your things," he said, "hats and shoes and things, and I shall never get tired of looking at you."

She came close to him and put her arms around him. Tony looked down at her, smiling.

From the train window she waved to him, and this time there were no tears, no heartaches at parting. This time she was coming back!

When Sherry arrived at the theater a day late the manager naturally showed his irritation but had been infuriated it would not have fazed Sherry in the least. The sky was gray and heavy with more snow, but for Sherry the sun was shining.

When she appeared on the stage the audience was disappointed. She could not sing a heart-breaking torch song about a lover who had gone away! She had found her lover! She wanted to sing about a future with Tony, about a house that was to be hers, and a happiness soon to begin!

Between appearances one might find her at her desk in her hotel room, writing rapidly. To her mother she wrote the full account of their faithful meeting. "Grandmother Sheridan will think that I, too, have a great faith but really blind belief guided me here. He has changed very little. More sober, perhaps, less flippant, but still as wonderful. Mother, I have started to live again."

"About money . . . you know I have made quite a lot of it but I want to go on Tony—poor. He has enough to keep us comfortably. And so all my money I am going to make over to you and Father to do with as you wish. Tim told me last summer he would like to study medicine and that will take a great deal of money. I want him to do it. Ina prefers art school to finishing school, and I want you and Father to spend next summer in Europe."

"I know you won't want to accept it but my wishes are final. You've done so much for Tony and me. Had it not been for you, he would not be the man he is today. As Tony said, we have gone a long way. We are different people, new people, wiser people. Only our love hasn't changed. I am so happy, so very happy. You know more than anyone how miserable I have been."

Sherry put the letter in an envelope and looked over the snow covered roofs of the western city. She took another piece of note-paper and wrote, "Dear Eric, it wasn't a fool's errand, my dear. I have found him, or rather, he found me, and we will be married next week. Thank you, Eric, for having been my devoted friend. Friend! You hate that, don't you, when you wanted to be my lover? I feel that one of these days you will compose something of value and I shall be proud that I have known you. But you must love deeply before you can write music, great music. I have never been a glamorous person, Eric. I'm plain and simple and you love glamorous women. When I say good-bye to you, I am saying good-bye to a world that was very kind, but to a world in which I never quite belonged. You will undoubtedly be a great success and love many beautiful women but I, Eric, prefer to marry Tony and be just his wife."

But the time was getting late. Sherry dressed. Jim, who had brought the car, called for her and took her to the theater.

Someone knocked on the door of her dressing room.

"Come in," said Sherry.

It was the manager, a swarthy, middle-aged man, gesticulating wildly when he talked.

"They tell me," he said, "that you are going to retire from the stage and the radio."

"Yes, News seems to travel fast, doesn't it?"

"Oh, but that's too bad, too unfortunate."

"I am going to be married."

"Oh! And your career . . . Oh, I see, I understand! My wife, she was an actress, too, but when we got married, she quit the stage, too. How is a woman going to be an actress and raise a family, too? We have five wonderful children." He shook his head. "Ah, but you are a man's wife. You gave up a fine career to be a man's wife."

When Sherry returned to the theater that night, she wrote Henderson a long letter which read in part, "You have been so kind to me I couldn't send a mere telegram. You deserve an explanation, and I told him about Tony and the long course of their love affair. 'There are, I am sure, other girls with more talent than have who will be willing to be your songbird. And whatever singing I do in the future will be in my own living room. This is difficult to do . . . more so than I realized, because people have been so kind. I owe a great deal of my success to you.'"

There are so many people to write to, so many things that needed her attention, but those old ties with the old life had to be severed before the new life could be begun.

She liked to close her eyes and give herself up to dreams. And she could see a living room, cozy and bright, and in the dim light were Tony and she, Tony's dark hair! His smile. His clear laughter.

Thursday night was her last public appearance. All that day she had been excited. All plans were made to go to Tony in the morning. Jim was to drive the car back east and leave it with her family, and then join his own family. When she went to Tony, she would go alone, unaccompanied, poor.

Announcement of her retirement had been in the evening papers and when she stepped out on the stage wearing a shimmering dress, the storm of applause was greater than ever. Tonight she sang a happy song of lovers reunited. A song to Tony and to that future they would make together. After her last song, the swarthy little manager appeared on the stage and made the solemn announcement that this was the last public appearance of Sherry Ross. For Sherry it was deeply touching. Strange and that a mere voice over the radio had become personal to millions of people. These people in the audience who lives she did not know knew all about her. They knew she was giving up everything for a boy named Tony!

People thronged the stage-door entrance when she came right with the world! This Christmas was not to be spent in Hollywood, rich and glittering though it was. It would be with Tony . . . and she would be his wife.

Sleep was impossible that night. Did Tony, too, stay in the darkness with happy eyes? "Keep us as we are now," she prayed, "happy and in love and unafraid," laughing quietly to herself. "I shall be sleepy tomorrow. I shall be a sleepy bride. Tomorrow is my wedding day!"

The next morning she said good-bye to Jim and then wrote to Janet and Carl. "I'm nobody now," she thought, putting on her brown hat. "I'm just Sherry Ross, stripped of glamour and fame. I'm not rich. I'm just a girl who is going to marry Tony."

On the train she looked out over the snowy landscape. "I'm not afraid, not afraid. He will be there to meet me. I'll find his eyes in a crowd, and he'll smile tenderly and take me by the hand and lead me away. And today, late this afternoon, we'll be married and go home."

The train was quite crowded. People were going home for Christmas. Across the aisle from where Sherry sat the dangling legs of a doll had escaped a suitcase. On the street corners red-faced boys were selling Christmas trees and the faces of little children were bright with anticipation.

Just before the train stopped Sherry gave herself a last glance in the mirror. "Idiot! Anybody can see you're going to be a bride today! I'm glad! I'm so glad I waited!"

When she stepped off the train, a brown-clad girl with clear white skin and dark hair framing her face, she stopped still for a moment and looked around. There he was! There was Tony, pacing up and down with characteristic bridgroom impatience.

Across the space where people hurried, their eyes met and they started to walk toward each other, meeting halfway.

Sherry heard a woman say, "This is the right train," and she thought, "Yes, and this is the right man!"

Lifting her head, a proud, happy smile on her lips she walked toward the "right man and the right life."

The common potato originated in South America and was introduced to Europe by the Spaniards. The Irish were among the first people to adopt it as a staple food, and it soon became known as the "Irish potato." It really should be called the "American potato" because it was first raised in America.

UNCLE RAY'S CORNER

LIGHTS OF THE SKY.
I—"A Ball of Fire."

"What is the sun?"

The old answer to that question is, "The sun is a ball of fire."

That is a fairly good answer. The sun is a ball of great size, and it is covered with hot gases which seem to be burning.

As we all know, the sun looks small only because it is so far away. On the average, it is almost 93,000,000 miles from us. The diameter, or distance through it, is 864,000 miles. Clever men have made tests to find how hot the sun is. The temperature at the surface has been found to be about 10,000 degrees above zero Fahrenheit. We do not know how hot the inside of the sun is, but probably it is millions of degrees above zero.

Only a small part of the heat which the sun gives off ever reaches the earth. The rest warms other planets or, as it appears, goes to waste out in space.

A bridge of ice five miles thick stretching from the earth to the sun would be melted in a few seconds if all the rays of the sun were fixed upon it.

It may be hard to think of iron growing so hot as to melt into gas; but there is iron gas around the sun. The sun is so hot that solid iron could not exist there. Other metals are also in the form of hot gas at the surface of the sun.

In everyday life we see how a common thing can have three forms. Water is a liquid, but when frozen it turns into solid ice. When boiled, water turns into steam or, as we may say, into vapor or gas.

Pianist, Organist, Little Symphony Please Hearers at Concerts Here

Sunday's musical calendar brought three important concerts almost simultaneously—a piano recital by Oscar Unger, young pianist from South Carolina, at the Atlanta Woman's Club auditorium, sponsored by the music division of the club, Mrs. Bonita Crowe, chairman; an organ recital by Edna Bartholomew, organist and choir director of St. Mark Methodist church, inaugurating a series of recitals during March, commemorating the 250th anniversary of Johann Sebastian Bach, and the concert by the Emory University Little Symphony orchestra, conducted by Dr. Malcolm Dewey, at Glenn Memorial auditorium. And each event attracted an audience of gratifying proportions in spite of the beautiful day and the lure of out-of-doors.

Oscar Unger was heard for the first time in Atlanta. He is a pianist in his very early twenties. His playing reveals a talent of unusual caliber. His technical equipment is fleet and agile, and he uses it with easy dexterity. He played a program of ambitious proportions for so young an artist, but executed it in a creditable manner. There is a fine brilliance and verve in his musical declaration that indicates a brilliant future when the impetuosity of youth becomes a little more seasoned and polished. His interpretations proved him to be a serious student, though at times his pedal blurred the clarity of his fingers.

The Emory Little Symphony orchestra showed marked improvement in their concert, indicating that there has been serious interest and pride in its personnel. Their rendition of Beethoven's "Coriolanus Overture" and "Wedding March" from Mendelssohn's "Midsummer Night's Dream" received well-deserved plaudits. Priscilla Warren Lowmeyer, well-known cellist, was the guest soloist, playing with the orchestra Beethoven's "Symphonic Variations" in admirable

The bullet struck Parson in the middle of the forehead and glanced off his skull. He was treated at Grady hospital and dismissed.

Fields Funny as Ever As Star of "It's a Gift"

The prize of a puppet, old W. C. Fields, humorously announced about in the company of Baby LeRoy, who incidentally has found his voice, and makes "It's a Gift" not only one of the best comedies ever shown at the Capitol theater but a worthy successor to other Field masterpieces. A cast of well-known vaudeville stars is attracted to the play, and the play is frequently heard in equally pleasing routines. Among the best of the featured stage attractions is Joe Howard's famous "elephant act."

While operating a small country grocery store in New Jersey, Field inherits an orange grove in California. As is the case with many such legends, Field finds it is a white elephant after his 3,000-mile trip in an old broken-down automobile. Field steps in where angels fear to tread, and makes it pay. Baby LeRoy has something to do with that and proves to be a rather engaging lad, not only to the audience but to an average man.

Credit for the intriguing footling offering goes to the following: Tom and Babe Gordon, comedy team, who have been heard in many places; Bill Orcheron, leg-of-man act; Martin and Marvel, a specialty act; Clyde Jewell, an extraordinary act; the Daring Midwesterners, a specialty act; and the Apache Music Masters.

A Laurel & Hardy comedy, a Paramount Pictorial and a Pathe newswear are shown.

Fast-Talking Pat O'Brien Stars in Film at Georgia

Some of the fastest talking on the screen is done by Pat O'Brien, playing the character of "Spot Cash" Cutler in the picture, "I Sell Anything," the feature presentation of the Georgia theater, today and Tuesday.

Pat plays the part of a high-pressure salesman who talks his way into a big-time auctioneer on Park Avenue and is taken over by a society dame as easily as he takes over the other suckers. She puts him back on Second avenue, where he is supposed to lead a fairly respectable life of petty swindling in the auction shop from which he climbs at the beginning of the picture.

Clair Dodd, the society girl who causes so much trouble, and completely fools "Spot Cash," Roscoe Karns and Russell Hopton, friends of the sure-fire auctioneer and Ann Dvorak, his faithful love, whom he turns in the last, form the supporting cast.

His trouble starts when he sells Clair Dodd, the society girl, an ornate belt buckle that he thought to be worth about 50 cents for $50. She sells it to the Metropolitan Museum of Art for $5,000, and then the fun begins.

The story is by Albert J. Cohen and Robert T. Shannon. It was adapted for the screen by Brown Holmes and Sidney Sutherland, and directed by Robert Florey.

A newswear, a comedy and a short travel picture on the "Sear" complete the bill.

Atlantans Enjoy Gayeties Aboard Mediterranean Cruiser

By Sally Forth.

SATURDAY'S mail brought the first letters from Atlantans enjoying a Mediterranean cruise aboard the steamer Statendam. Bearing the postmark of Gibraltar, the ship's first stop since it sailed out of New York harbor in early February, the letters tell of the many daily activities aboard the liner. Each letter told of the happy manner in which Mrs. Alonzo Richardson reflected credit upon Georgia when she spoke at the "Boost Your States" party with 30 states being represented among the passengers. For her clever and witty speech, this beloved Atlantian was awarded first prize. Substantiating her claims for Georgia's feminine beauty, she presented for the ship's audience the group of lovely Georgia belles on board, stating that these "Georgia Peaches" were not the kind to be "canned."

Born a leader, Mrs. Inman Sanders, who is head of the Atlanta travelers, is displaying ability equal to that of a general, according to the letters. Ever ready to assist the 18 members of her party, she manages all details of the trip in a quiet and efficient manner. Lucky indeed, thinks Sally, are those who choose her for their traveling companion.

Others mentioned in the letters were Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Oglesby, who are proving extremely popular with the ship's passengers, as are Mrs. J. N. Goddard and her charming daughters, Mrs. Stanton Pickens and Miss Mary Elkin Goddard. The most youthful member in the Atlanta party is young Peas Fletcher, who is the favored companion of his beautiful grandmother, Mrs. Frank Meador, who has won the admiration of all members of the party by her kindness and gracious personality.

Sally does not need to tell you that Mrs. Charles Sisson is a favorite with the passengers and her becoming and always-appropriate costumes are the subject of much flattering comment. Another member of the group noted for her graciousness and her readiness to make those around her happy is Mrs. George Forrester.

The statuesque beauty and graceful dancing of Mrs. Emily Robinson Head and Miss Frances Schwab make them sought-after figures in the Statendam's handsome ballroom each evening. An erstwhile Atlantian traveling with Mrs. Sanders' party is lovely Jane Lynch, whose charm and beauty elicit much admiration from the passengers and ship's officers.

Dorothy Illge, who is also responsible for Georgia being acclaimed the most popular state represented. This lovely young belle brought thunderous applause at the opening of the "Nut Club" aboard the ship when she sang a "blues" song, the deep tone of her voice being perfectly suited for this type of song.

Other members of the Georgia party adding interest and pleasure to the voyage are Mr. and Mrs. George Lanier, of West Point, and their attractive daughter.

Junior Group Is Organized By Starling Chapter of Legion

The meeting of the first patriotic group of children under seven years of age was held recently at the home of Mrs. J. C. Mellichamp, first vice president of National Service Star Legion.

Sixteen children, their mothers and grandmothers, were present. The meeting was sponsored by the Starling chapter, Service Star Legion. The small guests gave the pledge to the flag and sang words of a love song. Mrs. Mellichamp made a speech of welcome, explaining that for a long time there had been junior members of the guild. She has organized over a dozen of these patriotic children, who are now being trained in the making of the great increase during the year.

She stated that they were not only celebrating George Washington's birthday, but honoring the memory of their loved ones who were heroes in the World War. The application blanks will preserve the records of these soldiers in Rhodes Memorial hall, and among the treasures of the National Service Star Legion.

Mrs. Mellichamp introduced the following ladies who greeted these patriotic children: Mrs. John L. Fulghum, state president of Service Star Legion; Mrs. L. P. Rosser, president of Atlanta and Fulton county chapter; Mrs. E. B. Williams and Mrs. Benjamin F. Holtzendorfer, vice presidents of this chapter; Mrs. H. M. Nelson, chairman of the Druid Hills Junior chapter; Mrs. L. N. Hagdale, Mrs. Warren D. Davis, national director, and all the grandmothers present.

Mrs. Luther Bridges gave a musical program. J. C. Mellichamp received a prize, a framed silhouette of George Washington, while Mrs. Carolyn Lindsay received a picture of Uncle Sam.

Mrs. Marion Ralph Moore was selected as the chairman of this group, and Mrs. Mellichamp will aid her in winning the loving cup for the Atlanta Starling chapter, whose charter members are Emily Moschella, Patricia Brown, Helen Long, Mildred Tate, Betty Booth, Louise Park, Arthur Park Jr., Ira Ferguson, John T. Miss Elizabeth Ann Treseder Weds Taylor Land in New York

NEW YORK, March 3.—(AP)—Miss Elizabeth Ann Treseder and Taylor Land, both formerly of Atlanta, were married this morning just before the service in St. James Protestant Episcopal church.

Only members of the bride's family and a few friends of the young couple were present.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. H. W. B. Donagan. Attendants were Miss Jane Treseder, sister of the bride, and George Harris, formerly of Atlanta.

The bride was given in marriage by her father, Ross Treseder, of the Hotel Carlyle in this city. She wore a blue traveling suit with grey fur collar, and a small black hat.

Others present were Mrs. Treseder, Misses Sarah Hopkins, Louise Harris, and Dorothy Shivers, formerly of Atlanta, and Nita Easley, of Montclair, N. J.

Land, who has been living in Newark, N. J., is the son of Judge and Mrs. Max Land, of Atlanta, who were not present. He attended Emory University and was formerly employed by the Coca-Cola Company.

The bride is a graduate of the Finch school in this city. After the ceremony, the wedding party returned to the Hotel Carlyle for breakfast, after which Mr. and Mrs. Land took a noon train for Miami Beach. Upon their return from their wedding trip, they will live in New York.

Business Women Announce Plans For This Week

Due to the many activities for national business women's week, March 17-23, the meeting of the Business and Professional Women's Club March 13 will be eliminated. The board meeting will be held Wednesday evening, March 6, at 7:30 o'clock with Mrs. James E. Fuller, Atlanta hotel.

Miss Juliet Dowling, chairman of the membership committee, and business two new members: Miss Lucie V. Harris, teacher in the Moreland school, and Miss Pearl Flanagan, with General Motors Truck Corporation.

The choral group, Mrs. Grace Lee Townsend, leader, will meet with Miss Maude H. Sewell, 1156 Rosedale drive, N. E., Sunday afternoon, March 3, at 3:30 o'clock.

Mrs. Lila Ellis will review "Heaven's My Destination" by Thornton Wilder, at her weekly lecture Monday evening, March 4, at 7:30 o'clock at the Atlanta Gas Light Company auditorium. Mrs. Ellis has been giving an outline of the history and development of several of the different countries, talking last on Japan and Mexico, and will give others at future dates.

Mrs. F. C. McKinney has extended an invitation to members of the club to an informal tea to be given at her home, 908 Ponce de Leon avenue, Sunday afternoon, March 10, at 4 o'clock. The complete plans for national business women's week, which will open the following Sunday, will be discussed, and each member, who has not already been assigned any particular phase of the work, will be familiarized with her particular duties.

Smith-Littlefield.

WASHINGTON, Ga., March 3.—State-wide interest centers in the announcement made by Miss Annie Plucker of the marriage of Miss Mildred Littlefield to Taylor Land, of New York.

The bride is the daughter of Charles Irvin Smith, who formerly resided in Washington, but is now in business in Tucson, Ariz., and the late Mrs. Lillian McCleskey Smith. She is the granddaughter of Mrs. R. Motte Smith, of Washington, and is with the Atlanta Coal Co. Mr. and Mrs. Littlefield were residents of Washington while the Rev. McCleskey was pastor of the Little River circuit, of the north Georgia conference.

When 3 years old, following the death of her mother, Mrs. Littlefield made her home with Miss Plucker until she was graduated from Washington High school and moved to Atlanta, to be the companion of Mrs. Claude L. Collier, sister of Miss Plucker.

Mr. Littlefield is the son of Mr. and Mrs. R. I. Littlefield, of Decatur; a graduate of Georgia School of Technology, and is with the Atlanta Coal Co. Mr. and Mrs. Littlefield are residents of 1256 Boulevard, N. E., Atlanta.

Gilbert-Browne.

Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Gilbert announce the marriage of their daughter, Holland Vivian, to Clarence Sidney Browne, of Atlanta, formerly of Madison.

The ceremony was solemnized by the Rev. Charles Liphart, on Sunday morning, February 3. Those witnessing the marriage service included the bride's sisters, Misses Eugenia and Glendora Gilbert and Miss Inanna Attaway and Glenn Boles.

With Mrs. William F. Stone, of Chattanooga, Tenn., vice president of the southern section of the D. A. C., Mrs. Calfee and Mrs. Wood will form the trio to be honored by Mrs. Hugh Harden, state first vice president, at luncheon at the Piedmont Driving Club today to which state and national officers are invited.

This afternoon Mesdames Calfee, Stone and Wood will be honored at the reception at Craigie House, home of the Atlanta chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution. Acting as hosts of the affair will be the Atlanta chapter, D. A. R.; Joseph Habersham chapter, D. A. R.; Colonial Dames of XVII century; Sons and Daughters of the Pilgrims; Founders and Patriots; General John Floyd chapter, U. S. D. 1812, and the James Edward Oglesby chapter, D. A. C. Forming the receiving line will be the honor guests and heads of each of the hostess organizations. Mrs. Moreland Speer, of Chattanooga, Tenn., will preside at the tea table and assisting in the entertainment of the guests will be representatives from each organization.

Healthy Prospects for Year Seen by National Products Oil Company Head

SPRING TO BRING INCREASE IN USE OF GASOLINE, OILS

Marietta Street Concern Is Well Equipped To Handle Commercial, Industrial Accounts.

With warmer weather rapidly approaching, the National Products Oil Company, 1000 Marietta street, N. W., looks for one of the biggest years in its history from the standpoint of distribution of gasoline and motor oils, according to D. W. Winfree, president.

The nation's speedy return to normalcy, steady gains in re-employment, more leisure, increased earning power and the advent of spring, he asserts, will combine this year to considerably increase the use of automobiles.

The National Products Oil Company, which is Atlanta jobber for the popular products of the American Oil Company, including its new action Orange American gasoline, specializes in wholesale accounts for commercial and industrial users of gasoline and oils. In addition, it handles all makes of oil burners. It also handles kerosene in wholesale quantities.

The company serves a large number of independent gasoline and oil stations, through which the demand for New Action Orange American gasoline, in recent months, has registered phenomenal gains. The volume of sale of this popular gasoline, it is stated, has increased as much, or more, during recent months as many of the products of major competitors.

Among other products of the American Oil Company handled by the National Products Oil Company are its full line of motor oils and greases. It carries at all times a number of other well-known Pennsylvania paraffin base and western motor oils of proven worth.

With this all-inclusive service, the company has long served many of the largest commercial users of gasoline and oils in the Atlanta territory, with a gratifyingly satisfactory record, not only in the matter of products but of service.

The National Products Oil Company, it is pointed out, is the oldest independent oil burner dealer and distributor in Atlanta. Its lines include all types of Hart, Clean-Heat, Quiet May and Ray oil burners, on which it gives a 24-hour repair, replacement and fuel service.

At its plant on Marietta street, the company receives its products direct from the refineries in carload quantities. It is situated on a spur line of the N. C. & St. L. railway, and maintains storage facilities with 150,000 gallons capacity, from which it is in a position to fulfill any size of order promptly.

Grant & Company Records Steady Improvement in '35

Increase in Volume for First Two Months Is Reported in North and East Central Georgia.

A substantial improvement in its volume of business throughout the southeast during January and February is reported by Grant & Company, well-known southern investment house, with offices at 61-63 Forsyth street, N. W., Atlanta. An increase for the two months is reported by two of the firm's leading field representatives, Sam T. Brannan and S. S. Tomlin, both covering territories in the north and east central section of Georgia. Each of these men secured a larger volume of business from old accounts and have reported nearly twice as many new accounts thus far in 1935 as were obtained during the same period of 1934.

Mr. Brannan and Mr. Tomlin are men of long experience in the investment security field. Each of them has been dealing in and handling investment issues for over 15 years. Both have been with Grant & Company more than 10 years. They are handling some of the largest accounts and enjoy the confidence of many of the most substantial and conservative investors in their territories, which include Athens, Commerce, Gainesville, Milledgeville, Buford, Covington, Thomson, Greensboro, Sparta, Jackson, Griffin, Forsyth, McDonough, Washington, Madison, Eatonton and other important Georgia towns.

In accordance with Grant & Company's established policy of furnishing investors with complete, dependable information on their investments, the field representatives of the firm carry with them the condensed statistical and bulletin services of the leading independent investment advisory organizations. Mr. Brannan and Mr. Tomlin both carry with them detailed information on an unusual number of stocks and bonds of all types—and are prepared to extend helpful co-operation and counsel to investors in analyzing their holdings and laying out carefully planned programs of investment.

In commenting on the outstanding record of the company during recent months by Mr. Brannan, Mr. Tomlin and several other of the firm's field representatives, E. S. Grant, president of Grant & Company, said:

"The increasing volume of business which is reported by our leading representatives is attributable to the close, interested attention which they give each client's investment problems, and the fact that they are experienced, well trained and thoroughly prepared to render a valuable service to investors. In addition to their own experience and ability, our men have at their command our very complete financial library and the helpful co-operation of a competent analytical and advisory staff which is constantly on the alert for information and news on economic, financial and industrial developments that might affect the interest of our clients."

"There is plenty of business available in the south for sound, conservative, public-spirited investment firms who go after it aggressively—and who make it an inflexible policy to give their clients interested, helpful co-operation in the careful handling and development of their investment funds, assisting in the selection of sound securities and in maintaining a close check on their holdings after purchases have been made."

Commenting on the prospects for further improvement in the firm's business during 1935, Mr. Grant stated, "We expect a continuation of our sound co-operative policies, plus intelligent effort and hard work on the part of representatives to bring us an even larger volume of business during 1935 than we experienced during 1934 and 1933, two of the best years enjoyed by our firm since 1920."

Samuel Insull Faces Second Trial Today

CHICAGO, March 3.—(AP)—Samuel Insull Sr., victim in his legal battle with the government, takes his stand in court tomorrow against the charges of the state of Illinois.

Prosecutor John O'Hara and Chief Defense Counsel Floyd Thompson agreed today no further continuance would be sought of trial of the state's accusation that the white-haired financier embezzled $65,000 from his principal holding company, the Middle West Utilities Company.

The state's allegations against him resemble closely the charges on which his brother and assistant, Martin, was acquitted several weeks ago. The indictment specifies that Insull used securities of Middle West to the value of $65,000 to cover personal loans with brokers in supporting his market accounts.

M'CLAREN MAKER STRESSES VALUE OF DIXIE INDUSTRY

Bill Todd Is Atlanta Dealer for Southern-Made Tires; Production Is Increased.

Realization by the south that only through the development of its industrial backbone can prosperity be assured of a livelihood and opportunity comparable to other sections has brought growth to the McClaren Rubber Company's automobile tire plant in Charlotte, N. C.

This was disclosed in a recent interview with H. E. Williams, vice president and general sales manager, following completion of a survey of the territory. In the meantime, his factory in Charlotte has speeded its operation to sustain full capacity.

Bill Todd, at 323 Spring street, N. W., is Atlanta dealer for McClaren tires. He and dealers in other sections of the south report the people of Dixie are rapidly becoming more partial to southern-made products. "They realize," said Mr. Williams, "that the use of southern-made products is but another form of self-preservation, though by no means a truly selfish interest."

"On the other hand," Mr. Williams continued, "dealers report that tire users and prospects for other southern-made products recognize that the economic future of the south, the future of our children and their children, cannot be assured unless southern industry prospers, and that industry can not prosper unless its products are steadily used."

"The use of southern-made products creates more employment locally, thus reducing local taxation, increasing local buying power through larger pay rolls. But more important, the encouragement and building up of local industry will go far toward solving the problem of a business career for our grown-up sons and daughters, who otherwise would have limited opportunities in the south."

The McClaren organization feels keenly its responsibility and is earnestly building up an industry of which the south may well be proud. It is meeting with success, but attributes this success not alone to executive ability but to its determination to construct an automobile tire in the south to surpass other makes of tires on the market today.

Production at the McClaren factory has been moved up to capacity; four shifts of workers are employed—a hitherto unattained peak so early in the season—and plans are nearing completion for the installation during the next month of much new equipment. This new equipment will enable the company to increase its mill capacity about one-third, and its tube-producing department substantially.

All production department employees are working on a 36-hour weekly basis, and the McClaren workers are known for the spirit of camaraderie that prevails and the "family feeling" which permeates every department of the organization. That is because each is earning a living in the south, and not one would want to live elsewhere, said Mr. Williams. Thus it was shown how the development of industry in the south makes for happy people, gives opportunities to the rising generations, and assures the south that just as it was in the forefront of things when this country was molded and formed, it will be in the forefront as it grows greater through the years.

Record Year of Popularity for Ford V-8 Is Predicted by Ragsdale Motor Company

J. A. Ragsdale, president (inset) of the Ragsdale Motor Company, in East Point, recently appointed as an authorized Ford dealer, predicts a record year for the V-8, more than 50 of which his company has sold during the first two months of the year. The company's plant at 318-320 North Main street, East Point, including sales and show rooms and repair department, is shown here, with four of the latest Ford models.

A year of unprecedented volume in automobile sales, with the Ford V-8 leading the field, is predicted by J. A. Ragsdale, president of the Ragsdale Motor Company, Inc., which maintains sales and showrooms as well as a completely equipped and efficiently staffed Ford repair shop at 318-320 North Main street, East Point.

As an indication of the increasing popularity of the Ford V-8 and in support of his prediction, Mr. Ragsdale Saturday pointed to the fact that his company closed the month of February with deliveries and unfilled orders for approximately 50 cars. In addition, approximately 100 used car sales were recorded for the month.

These figures are of special significance, in that they not only indicate a strong surge toward the V-8 but a positive recognition of Mr. Ragsdale as a notable figure in automotive circles. He has been in the automobile business here for the last 11 years, but only two months ago assumed the agency for Ford. That he has rolled up such an impressive sales figure in but one of those two months with a new line bespeaks much for the high standards and principles upon which his business has operated in the past decade or more.

The Ragsdale Motor Company, he points out, is the only Ford agency in the Greater Atlanta zone south of ing generations, and assures the south that just as it was in the forefront of things when this country was molded and formed, it will be in the forefront as it grows greater through the years.

Marietta street. In addition to the V-8 line, which includes trucks in all standard sizes, the company maintains at all times a varied stock of thoroughly reconitioned used cars in all makes and models.

The company's mechanical department, with commodious quarters in the same building with the sales and showrooms, is in charge of Bert Stowers, whose more than 20 years of experience in automotive repair work equips him admirably to efficiently handle any type of repair job. He and every member of his staff of eight assistants has been thoroughly trained for Ford work in the Ford factory.

The mechanical department is completely equipped with the most modern approved Ford tools and other apparatus, especially designed for every type of Ford repair and adjustment. The Ragsdale Motor Company also maintains a completely stocked parts department, where Ford owners may obtain immediate replacement of any part.

The company, Mr. Ragsdale announces, is in position now to assure immediate delivery on any model of the new V-8 line, and will be glad to receive calls for demonstrations by one of its courteous and efficient sales-

Insurance Head

HAROLD SHLENSKY.

Questioned concerning Central Mutual branch in Atlanta will be 304 Ten Forsyth Street building. The company's affairs will be managed by R. H. Zachary, with William R. Timmons in charge of the underwriting department. Both Mr. Zachary and Mr. Timmons are well known in insurance circles in the southeast and with full home office facilities in the Atlanta branch, they will be in position to offer local agents coverage on long-distance trucks operating under state permit, on taxicabs and buses, as well as the usual run of pleasure car risks.

Mr. Shlensky said during his stay in Atlanta, "and I am depending upon Mr. Zachary and Mr. Timmons to help us in our program of expansion for the year 1935, which anticipates the fourth annual increase of 100 per cent in premium volume."

Central Mutual has specialized on long-distance trucking risks, a classification that has been looked on with disfavor by many of the older companies; yet, a line with Central Mutual that has been widely written and at a profit in spite of the fact that rates consistently at 20 per cent under manual rates have been charged.

Local agencies throughout the state of Georgia are being established and will do business through the new Atlanta office.

CENTRAL MUTUAL TO OPEN BRANCH IN ATLANTA SOON

R. H. Zachary To Be Manager of Southern Office, in Ten Forsyth Street Building.

During his visit in Atlanta this week, Harold Shlensky, (photo below at left) president of Central Mutual Insurance Company of Chicago, completed arrangements for opening a southern branch in Atlanta.

The location of the new Central Mutual branch in Atlanta will be 304 Ten Forsyth Street building. The company's affairs will be managed by R. H. Zachary, with William R. Timmons in charge of the underwriting department. Both Mr. Zachary and Mr. Timmons are well known in insurance circles in the southeast and with full home office facilities in the Atlanta branch, they will be in position to offer local agents coverage on long-distance trucks operating under state permit, on taxicabs and buses, as well as the usual run of pleasure car risks.

PROHIBITION ENFORCEMENT HIT AT DRUG MEETING

Howard, Lindsay and Alexander Speak at DeKalb Courthouse Rally.

Asserting that no effort has been made to enforce the prohibition laws, William Schley Howard, well-known Atlanta lawyer, told a mass meeting of dry law supporters at the DeKalb county courthouse Sunday afternoon that "honest enforcement is needed in Georgia."

Other speakers were Representative Paul L. Lindsey and District Attorney Commissioner Hooper Alexander Jr., whose father assisted in drafting the present state dry law. Mrs. Mary Harris Arthur, well-known dry leader, and W. E. Dendy, president of University School for Boys, addressed a similar meeting at Chamblee.

Alexander predicted that "if the liquor question is referred to the people, Georgia will remain dry."

"There is no such thing as a good liquor law, and liquor will never enter Georgia by my vote," Lindsey said. He said he was opposed to placing the sale of liquor in private hands, and termed such an arrangement as "one step away from socialism."

Howard was a member of congress when the national prohibition law was passed. He said that powerful liquor lobbies which opposed passage of the bill are now spending money and effort to open up dry states for the liquor crowd.

James Morton, secretary of the Christian Council of Atlanta, will address the Men of Justice at 8 o'clock tonight at 1214 Mortgage Guarantee building. Distribution of obscene literature among high school students will be discussed.
